

Somogyi phenomenon

Somogyi phenomenon [somogy phenomenon] refers to a condition in which posthypoglycemic hyperglycemia occurs.

- It is caused by an exaggerated response of counterregulatory hormones (glucagon, catecholamines, somatotropin, cortisol).
- It occurs in diabetics treated with insulin.
- It is more common in children.

Links

Related articles

- Glucose | Glycemia / determination
- Diabetes mellitus