Category:Check breakdown

Hi Cooba,

I am sorry, but I had to rollback your editation. I need here the category Administration. The reason is simple. This page can be find here for easier work of our editors! The situation is the same with other categories from editorial process...

Thank you for understanding...

Hi,

I understand what you mean. However, I think there're some reasons why it should be changed. Category:Editorial process is a subcategory of Category:Administration designed especially for storing all the categories from editorial process. In my opinion it's even easier to present the Category:Editorial process as a good place to start, since there are no other categories like Category:Pages for deletion to confuse the beginners. Also, I think these categories shouldn't be in the Category:WikiLectures, which would otherwise easily become to big and chaotic.

Last but not least, I don't think we should change the structure we have established in WikiSkripta.

Thanks for your reaction anyway, I get it would be confusing for the new editors, if the location of the categories suddenly changed. Nevertheless, if properly announced, I would suggest changing the structure when it's still small and there're only few people involved.

What do you think? --Jakub Štefela 21:28, 5 July 2011 (CEST)

Yes, this is even better idea. --
