

Von Graefe's sign

Looking down, the movement of the upper eyelid is delayed by the movement of the bulbus and a sclera crescent appears above the iris. This Symptom is typical for hyperthyroidism and Graves disease and indicates exophthalmic goiter. See the video below for better understanding.

Related articles

- Graves disease
- Thyrotoxicosis

References

KLENER, P.. Vnitřní lékařství. 3.. edition. 2006. ISBN 80-7262-431-8.