

Agglutinogen

Agglutinogen is a substance of antigenic nature, the presence of which in the body triggers the production of a specific antibody, so-called agglutinin. The reaction between agglutinin and agglutinin causes the aggregation (or agglutination) of the cells on the surface of which the agglutinin is located.

Links

Related Articles

- Antigen
- Antibodies
- Immune system
- Agglutination • Agglutinin

Sources

- ŠVÍGLEROVÁ, Jitka. Agglutinin [online]. [cit. 2011-01-06]. <<http://wiki.lfp-studium.cz/index.php?title=Aglutinin&oldid=101>>.