

Alpha-1-microglobulin

α -1-microglobulin is a blood plasma protein that inhibits leukocyte migration and the proliferative response of leukocytes to antigenes. Its concentration in the blood increases with a decrease in glomerular filtration. It can be found in the urine in the case of tubular proteinuria. Its molecular weight is 26 000.^[1]

Links

- Proteinuria

References

1. RACEK, J. Klinická biochemie. First edition. Galén – Karolinum, 1999. pp. 63. ISBN 80-7262-023-1.