

Chemicals in buildings

Chemical substances are a serious problem in the indoor environment of buildings. They can enter the building from the outside (even with closed windows) or they can originate directly from sources located in the building. We distinguish:

- Inorganic substances in buildings
- Organic substances in buildings

Links

Related Articles

- Consequences of staying in buildings
- Health issues of radon
- Microbiological and biological risks of staying in buildings

Source

- BENCKO, Vladimír, et al. Hygiena : Učební texty k seminářům a praktickým cvičením. 2. edition. Praha : Karolinum, 1998. ISBN 80-7184-551-5.