

Fotoluminiscence

The radiated energy absorbed by the substance is transformed into new radiation (with a longer wavelength), which either disappears almost simultaneously with the interruption of future radiation (fluorescence), or lasts significantly longer (phosphorescence).

Using the phenomenon

- making invisible radiation (UV, RTG etc.) visible.