

Genitofemoral nerve

The genitofemoral nerve is found in the abdomen. It has two branches, 1) the genital branch and 2) femoral branch supply sensation to the upper anterior thigh, as well as the skin of the anterior scrotum in males and mons pubis in females. The femoral branch is different from the femoral nerve, which also arises from the lumbar plexus.