

Krabbe's disease

Krabbe's disease (also Krabbe's globoid leukodystrophy) belongs to the leukodystrophies . It belongs to hereditary diseases caused by congenital defect of lysosomal enzymes. The result is an unbounded, non-cancerous accumulation of mature adipose tissue in places where it does not occur under normal conditions. It is a galactocerebroside β -galactosidase deficiency. Affects CNS cells.

Links

- ws:Krabbeho choroba

Related articles

- Leukodystrophy
- Lipidoses
- Hereditary metabolic disorders
- Inherited metabolic disorders of small molecules
- Hereditary metabolic disorders of complex molecules

Source

-

Template:Navbox - dědičné metabolické poruchy

Kategorie:Vložené články Kategorie:Neurologie Kategorie:Patologie Kategorie:Pediatric Kategorie:Patobiochemie