

The McBurney point

The McBurney point is called the junction of the navel and the spina iliaca anterior superior, at a distance of 2/3 from the navel. Up to this point, the maximum pain in acute appendicitis is promoted. Together with Blumberg's sign and Rousing's sign, we rank it among the peritoneal signs of acute appendicitis.

Links

Related articles

- Lanzas point
- Acute appendicitis

Bibliography

- KLENER, Paul. Propaedeutics in internal medicine. 3rd revised edition edition. Galen, 2009. 324 pp. ISBN 978-80-7262-643-4.

External links

- McBurney's point on Wikipedia